My brother is an atheist (I am a practicing Catholic), so I spend a lot of time debating with him. The Nature, Power, Limitation of Apologetics 2. Objective Truth 16. It's also not as smug as Kreeft's other books, but the smugness is there, which I think would be a huge turn off to any inquisitive agnostic or atheist. I'm planning to look up Bishop Barron's recommendation for fresher, more scientifically up to date arguments. The Problem of EvilPart IV: God Grace 7. Four Problems of Cosmology 6. Life After Death 11. We need your help to maintenance this website. Kreeft and Tacelli also recommend further reading sources like Evolution: A Theory in Crisis, which scientists claim is a ridiculous misinterpretation of evolution. The Divinity of Christ 8. Also, many of the books in the bibliography seem woefully outdated, but that's because this is an old book. The Bible: Myth or History?Part V: God Glory 10. Hell 13. We are a non-profit group that run this website to share documents. Obviously the heavy hitters can be, but meeting smug with smug is not compelling. That said, the authors of this book also claim evolution is most definitely plausible, and that religious zealots make a huge mistake writing it off. I don't think this would ever convince an open-minded atheist if I'm being honest, but it does a good job of showing how the atheist argument is just as fundamentalist as religious fundamentalists. As some other reviews mentioned, some arguments are strong, some are really weak. This book is a good primer, but I felt it only accomplished making an atheist or materialist argument just as dubious as an argument for God. There's a presumption that materialists are smug, which is not true a lot of the time. So, I'm not sure what to think of that, but the book rec made me trust other arguments less, and I think the same for a conscientious atheist or agnostic. I thought the resurrection arguments were interesting- something weird happened. Advanced embedding details, examples, and help! Christianity Other Religions 15.
